

Neshama Hospice

Residential hospice embraces a holistic model of family-centred end of life care. Compassion and spirituality permeate every aspect of hospice care as residents and families find themselves in a unique home-like environment, immersed in a community where everyone supports each other. Expertise goes far beyond pain and symptom management, as trained staff and volunteers understand that death does not and should not be treated merely as a “medical event”. Hospice staff view death as part of life and are there to provide emotional and spiritual support that adds a qualitative difference to one’s final days.
